If your organization does not have an effective continuity of operations plan or program, perhaps you should take the initiative to start or lead an effort for the good of the organization. Just as security and safety are everyone's responsibility, so are continuity and the sustainability and survivability of the organization. While many organizations are experiencing financial challenges, we need to make sure we have plans that will facilitate effective business recovery. A sudden or sustained loss of revenue because of a disaster may be fatal to the organization. For those who serve in the public sector, we are grateful, but want to encourage and facilitate rapid recovery of critical services.

If you are not interested or cannot join us, please pass this information to the first person your CEO or Agency Director would call after a serious emergency or disaster. Thank you.
